Feb 5, 2019 The Facebook Hacker Cup 2019 invites worldwide hackers to a global programming competition in 24/7 locked-down rooms with black and white-themed facilities. This competition is already well-known for its released 3.0 version, where hackers have broken in 7 out of 9 Facebook accounts and obtained the full list of Facebook users' passwords. The fourth edition of the Facebook Hacker Cup 2019 kicks off on Friday at noon UTC. Hackers will be able to access their competitors' accounts and cheat their way to winning the grand prize of $5,000. This year, the competition has been upgraded to include 24/7 programming rooms with black and white theme facilities. Successful Facebook Hacker has won $5,000 while second prize goes to Khalid Syed and third prize goes to Markos Marinos for their flawless cheating technique, which was discovered earlier this month. The picture above shows the rooms where the hackers have been locked in since January. The second event of the year will be held in Berlin from December 26 to 28. In it, 56 hackers will participate in the Hack Berlin competition, which is limited to teams of up to four people. With respect to the first competition, no password hacking sessions have been reported. However, it is safe to assume that the most challenging part of this program is for hackers to write working code in JavaScript to obtain Facebook users' passwords. Hackers can use this technique to crack

Facebook passwords with a working percentage of 85. Locked rooms To protect participants from possible hacking attempts, Facebook Hackers Cup 2019 has locked rooms with limited access for all the participants. The location of the rooms has remained a secret until the beginning
