A digital camera can capture an image of a subject and store the image data of the subject in a storage device. Also, the digital camera can receive, from an external apparatus such as a computer, image data representing the image of the subject. The digital camera can then display the image of the subject on a display device and/or can print the image of the subject on a printer. Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2001-143783 discloses a technique for searching through a database to find an image that has the same subject as a subject represented by image data of a captured image and for combining the image data of the captured image with the found image data. However, the above-mentioned technique can combine the image data of the captured image with the image data of the found image only if the image data of the captured image and the image data of the found image are received by the digital camera in a single operation. The image processing device in accordance with the invention has an image processing system that includes a camera that captures an image of a subject and that transmits image data of the image of the subject to the image processing system, a printer that prints the image of the subject, and a computer that connects the image processing system to the printer. The image processing system may further include a memory for storing the image data of the image of the subject. The image processing system can receive the image data of the image of the subject via the memory from the camera. The image processing system can also receive image data of the image of the subject via the memory from the computer. The image processing system can also send the image data of the image of the subject to the printer via the memory. Also, the image processing system may include a database that stores image data of a plurality of images each having a specific subject. The image processing system may also include a processor that searches the database for image data of an image of the specific subject and that combines the image data of the captured image and the found image data with the image data of the image of the specific subject. The image processing device may further include a display device that displays the image of the subject captured by the camera. Also, the

At different points in time, you may feel you are the right weight. But over time, you probably won’t. Feelings of not being good enough can be so strong that they take over. There is no way of knowing how much you are suffering. You may feel like you are alone with your feelings and ashamed of them. You may feel too light because your body doesn’t measure up to what others around you think you should look like. It doesn’t matter what weight you are, or what size you are – there are still a number of things that can make you feel bad about yourself.
