I have a table layout which contains a large number of rows and columns (which I fetch using a loader, but this is not relevant). I want to handle some input when the user is editing a cell.

For example, if the user is changing the value in a cell, then I want to know the value they have entered. I am able to access all of the fields except for the one in which the user is editing. I have tried many things to access the value being edited. I get a few of them to work, and some of them do not. Here are the three things that I have been able to access: 1) Rows.get(rowId) gets the entire row including the cell in which the user is editing. I can get the text value of this text field by using: Cell val = rows.get(rowId).editCell.get 2d92ce491b
