The tool is free to try for 30 days and comes with the Cadmium uptake in the neotropical plant Euphorbia spathulata. The metal uptake and accumulation pattern of the neotropical euphorbia was studied. Cadmium was not uptaken by the roots at concentrations below 1 micromol(L-1). Cadmium was uptaken through the lateral roots and the above-ground organs. A unique feature of the species is the synthesis of a Cd-selective surface coating that prevents uptake and toxicity. Surface coating is accomplished by a low molecular mass compound that is mainly located on the epidermal and hypodermal cell walls. These protective layers are synthesized at the onset of Cd loading. The high presence of this compound in the epidermal cells could be involved in the defense mechanisms of E. spathulata, a metal hyperaccumulator. Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia in neonates: diagnosis and management. Pneumocystis carinii is a leading cause of pneumonia in infants. Approximately 20% of infants who survive bronchiolitis/pneumonia have symptoms of P carinii pneumonia. Because infants with PCP have recurrent and refractory infections, appropriate therapy is important in reducing morbidity and mortality. There are currently three treatment options for PCP: trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole, pentamidine isethionate, and dapsone. The optimal regimen for PCP therapy is not yet established. 4bc0debe42
