Instead, use Adobe Illustrator or CorelDRAW. Those two programs are primarily for raster graphics and vector graphics, respectively. Many of the principles of photo editing you learn in this book can be applied to other programs. Check out Appendix B for some links to online tutorials and software programs. Art Arsenault About 6 years ago I found out I was going to be having a child. My wife and I started planning the best way to get him into our lives and how we would spend time with him as soon as he arrived. That same day I started using Photoshop Elements to design what I wanted our child to have. From there, the idea grew from there. A few years later I started teaching Photoshop Elements to my wife and family as a great way to get them to practice and prepare for designing themselves for school. Since teaching my wife and family, over 50 people have signed up to start doing their own Photoshop Elements courses and I've always been amazed at the end result. That's where the biggest trick of Photoshop Elements is discovered. It's an easy way to teach. If you can take a picture, you can edit it. Looking back, I wish I had started sooner. After teaching my family, I knew I wanted to share this with other parents. As a mom, when I gave up my job and became a stay-at-home mom, I wanted to give back to other moms who have the same ideas I have about raising my family. I'm still that same person today, sharing what I know about children's digital literacy and painting with parents. I have taught children ages 6 months to adults at religious, community, and non-profit organizations. You can find my classes at The people I've taught are all amazing. All the kids are involved in their education. They are learning something and that is great. But more than anything, they are learning how to become an active contributor to their education and learning. Row, Newshub, news, Source: internet, Sapa-AFP POP-TARO, Papua New Guinea - President Joko Widodo has been spotted filming a Netflix documentary in the South Pacific country of Papua New Guinea, where he was in training for a half Iron Man swim across the Great Barrier Reef. With a director's note describing the film as "a tale about what happens when an ordinary man decides to take on an extraordinary challenge," Widodo was seen training on Wednesday. The Indonesian president posted an image from a "triathlon" in the South Pacific on his official Facebook page. It appears he is swimming in the ocean, and is followed by a yellow kayak "making a sport dive near the starfish." The swim from the town of Port Moresby in Papua New Guinea to the more remote island of Biak in the heart of the Coral Sea is expected to take around 25 hours. The swim is part of Widodo's "Great Journey," which also includes visits to the countries of Australia and New Zealand. The underwater stages of the swim will be filmed by British cinematographer Johan Renck. Fellow Australian Clare Martin is co-executive producer of the project, and has written and directed films including "Whale Rider" and "Bran Nue Dae." "It is a story about transformation," Martin told The Associated Press, "how a small group of ordinary people can turn their small dreams into something extraordinary." A spokesman for Widodo would not say whether the documentary's topic would be the Indonesian president's move this year to shift the country's capital to the northern city of Jakarta from the island of Merauke in Papua. The spokesman said that "Joko Widodo (KW)... continued his journey in Papua New Guinea and that he is in good health." In a speech Thursday, the president said that according to the ancient history of Papua, it was where people went to find peace, freedom and spiritual guidance. Indonesia lies on the huge Sunda shelf on the northwest side of the great Coral Sea, and at times has had long-standing border disputes with Papua New Guinea over its part of New Guinea.
