What a spectacular market meltdown (yes, I said that). It's been some time since I've updated my site, and now I realize what a disservice I have been doing to my visitors. I have never been more stressed out or more busy, and it shows. I'm barely keeping it together. My original plans were to announce a new software release by the end of last week, which would have been coming out about the time of this update, but alas, that is now not going to happen. As you can imagine, I have been at a complete loss as to how to approach the situation, but I have finally figured out what to do and I just can't wait to release it. I will be able to say that I have decided to retire from the business of creating this software, and have hired an expert with the experience and skill to help me. He has agreed to work with me to come up with a new, more logical solution to the problems which I have had to deal with in the past. I am no longer the expert at creating software that I once was. I am no longer the developer. I am the user. I have been replaced. Therefore, I will be making my focus switch to marketing. I have always been a people person, and I have a passion for solving other people's problems. This is my chance to help other traders. I will now be focusing all of my time on my customers. I will still be around as a consultant, and I will be there to answer any questions or problems. If you need me, I will be there. I have a free training video waiting for all of my subscribers

Widget Engine(Updated 9:45 pm) A little girl who was shot and killed during a "family dispute" at a weekend party inside her home in Fayetteville will not be identified by the Fayette County Coroner's Office, but that won't stop the community from remembering her. Nia Beckford, a 4-year-old girl from Grovetown, was shot and killed Friday night at a party in the 14000 block of Kansas Avenue, just off Brittain Avenue in Fayetteville. Investigators say she was shot around 8:45 pm, shortly after she got out of her parents' bedroom. The child was taken to a local hospital, where she was pronounced dead. Police were called to the scene by a neighbor who said he saw a man run from the backyard. The neighbor, identified by police as Terry Miller, told News Channel 9 he could tell the child was dead, "because she was just laying in the grass and her legs were wiggling." Police say there was a party going on in the backyard at the time of the shooting. Shortly before the party, a man went to his home, where he told his wife he was going to the party to pick up a woman and child, police say. Instead, Miller is accused of picking up two women and taking them to the party in his car. According to Miller, he did not know the family of the children. When Miller returned, he was confronted by the child's mother, and a "verbal argument" ensued. During that argument, Miller shot the child, according to police. Investigators say they are still looking for the second woman in the car. The Fayette County Coroner's Office identified the child as Nia Beckford. The Coroner's Office says there were three gunshot wounds to the child's body. The cause of death was listed as multiple gunshot wounds. "We are so saddened by the loss of a little girl who is a family member," said Fayetteville Mayor Scott James. "This is tragic and we are shocked by this event. As I was told, this was a dispute between two adults over a child and the child was accidentally struck by a bullet," James said. Late Sunday, a memorial service
