Bing Maps SDK for Metro style apps (Beta) Whether you are developing an application on a Windows 8 PC or tablet for your local market or evaluating the Windows 8 platform for a global deployment on end-user computers, using the Windows Store application development platform makes developing Metro style apps a breeze. For a detailed description of the Windows Store application development platform, including coding and installation of Windows 8 applications, see Windows Store Application Development Guide for developers. Windows Store Application Development Guide Windows Store Application Development Guide (Beta) (...) Windows Store Application Development Guide (Beta) The Windows Store on Windows 8 Pro contains both preinstalled and optional apps. Microsoft is expected to implement an API for application developers that will allow developers to bundle native Windows Store apps with their own applications. An application could bundle any other libraries that it needs, even from other companies. The OS X version of the Windows Store does not include apps, but does contain downloadable apps from third parties. I'm compiling using clang, and linking with static libraries. Specifically, the following is the basic layout of what I'm doing (some pseudo-code, sorry): CModule.h CModule.cpp CModuleLinkage.h CModuleLinkage.cpp CModule defines: class A; class B; CModuleLinkage defines: void initialize(); void finalize(); CModule::initialize() and CModule::finalize() are defined as follows: // external.h // prototypes for internal.h void initialize(); void finalize(); // internal.h #include "external.h" class A; class B; // external.cpp void initialize(); void finalize(); // internal.cpp #include "external.h" class A; class B; If I compile both CModule.cpp and CModuleLinkage.cpp separately, they both compile and link correctly, with no issues. If I try to link them together, I get the following errors: external.o: initializer external.o:(.data.rel.ro.STRPTR.A+0x0): undefined reference to `vtable for A' collect2: error: ld returned 1 exit status I'm linking the.o files via: $g++ -static external.o CModuleLinkage.o -o Linked.exe I'm curious as to why this isn't working. Is it because the the compilation stage doesn't get access to the definitions defined in CModuleLinkage.cpp? I can think of two solutions: Compile both CModule.cpp and CModuleLinkage.cpp together, Cholangiocarcinoma. The majority of cholangiocarcinoma are large cell-type carcinomas (adenocarcinomas). The poor prognosis of this cancer is often due to dissemination at the time of diagnosis. Preoperative diagnosis has not yet been established, but a combination of tests using CT, MRCP, angiography, and endoscopic sphincterotomy can provide invaluable information for differential diagnosis. Radical surgical treatment, including extensive right and left hepatectomy and splenectomy, remains the only hope of cure for cholangiocarcinoma. Although some patients undergo a prolonged survival after such combined-modality therapy, many others, especially those at a relatively advanced stage, experience a relapse. In the past, only limited treatment options were available, but recent advances in molecular biology have led to the discovery of several new therapeutic strategies for cholangiocarcinoma. For example, surgical resection, although often curative, is often contraindicated in advanced cholangiocarcinoma. A novel therapy targeted against the epidermal growth factor receptor (EGFR) has been shown to be effective in inhibiting tumor growth in some patients. Peptide-drug conjugates such as the anti-HER-2 monoclonal antibody trastuzumab (Herceptin) and the EGFR-directed monoclonal antibody cetuximab (Erbix) may also have potential as novel therapies. Another strategy involves the inhibition of angiogenesis and lymphangiogenesis by using a variety of ang
