Keymacro is a free utility to map the keyboard keystrokes to macros. Keymacro's goal is to help you create a keyboard shortcut that performs a series of keystrokes. This is a very basic feature, but what makes it unique is that it doesn't only show you the resulting shortcut, but also provides the definition of the actual keystrokes in a "macro" format. You can then use this information to format your code with more ease. In the settings you can: • Set the keyboard layout • Set shortcuts for the most commonly used options • Set shortcuts for the most commonly used commands • Set macros for the keystroke formats, and create macros for the different formats • Add more shortcut formats with the format editor • Show other shortcuts options • Configure the last used shortcut, or show the most recent used shortcut Keymacro is a free software that will allow you to edit macros. KEYMACRO is free, open source software, which is released under the terms of the GNU GPL. You may copy, modify, distribute and use this program as you wish, for any purpose, provided you make no changes to it. Important! This software was first released for Windows, but it will run on any platform that supports the Windows Registry. Save your settings to the registry and launch the program on other computers. This software does not require Administrator privileges. Keymacro was created by Ludovic Billot - - based on the project that initiated by Karl Wilhelm Peters. Keymacro is 100% free software, as it was the second free software application created by Billot. Keymacro Free

MPos is a lightweight, open-source utility that lets you track the position of the mouse, with or without DPI scaling, while also showing you each pixel's RGB value. It is unobtrusive and can be customized to a great extent. Monitor the cursor's position on your screen The application's main function is self-explanatory. It will show you the XY coordinates of the cursor, in real-time, via a small overlay that can be moved to any position on your desktop. Additionally, MPos can also take DPI scaling into account, displaying the position of the cursor in both physical pixels and coordinates modified by DPI scaling. What's more, the current DPI scaling setting and raw DPI are also shown. Extensive customization options To configure the application, you need to right-click the tray icon. You can specify which parameters should be tracked and hide everything else from the overlay. Moreover, you can choose between the default and dark themes, customize the overlay's opacity and specify whether or not the application should be displayed in the taskbar and on top of all other windows. Unobtrusive, portable utility By playing around with the settings, you can end up with an overlay that displays only the information you care about, in a relatively unobtrusive manner. However, it would have been great if it were possible to resize the window and change the font. One of the perks of using MPos is that the program does not need to be installed before use and saves all your configurations in the same folder. You can, therefore, use it on multiple PCs and from portable storage devices. There are a few applications that can help you track your cursor's position, not all of them take DPI scaling into account, and some are pretty limited when it comes to customization options.
