What's New In?

Map Designer Pro is an affordable, easy-to-use mapping solution that allows you to create hyperlinks from picture clicks to specific areas. When you search for a site on a search engine, you will see most sites have a link to their contact details (the blue link next to the site) which gives you their phone number, email address etc. This is something that I want my site to have, it's a good marketing tool but I am reluctant to link to an email address which other people may also use. So my question is how do I remove this link? Of course this is probably just for my own site, but if you think there is a way to remove this link without it having an effect on search engine rankings or comments from visitors then that would be great. A: The simplest solution is to pay someone to remove it for you. Sometimes Google's robots can do this automatically, but I'd assume not. You could also create robots.txt file, and instruct the web crawler to skip the page. A: The right option is to put an alternative to the link in. You could put a link to a static page (one page all clickable links together) or a dead link. But instead of linking to an email address you could provide an explanation of how to contact you using a contact form, a telephone number or a email adress on that web page. Or you could put a link to an alternative web page in place of the link. Q: How to draw a gradient in a Material I'm building a Swing application using JavaFX and I need to draw a gradient on a JButton. I have found the setBackground method for the JButton, but unfortunately it's not having any effect. I've tried to follow a tutorial, but no luck.

protected void paintBackground(Graphics2D g, Color bgColor) { int width = getWidth(); int height = getHeight(); int x = getX(); int y = getY(); g.setColor(new Color(0, 255, 0)); g.fillRect(x, y, width, height); // clear background g.setColor(Color.BLACK); g.clearRect(0, 0
