We collected the data during the 2-hour video shoot, and we can now show you some of what we have developed. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. We collected the data during the 2-hour video shoot, and we can now show you some of what we have developed. THE FOOTBALL FIFA 22 introduces "Fluid Motion," a new way to control the ball that's based on the players movement and interaction, and it's one of the biggest innovations that we've ever done. The ball behaves intuitively in the final third, as players close down or move away from it. Pressing the TAP button brings the ball to you and holds it there, allowing you to adapt to any situation with a fluid motion. To keep it simple, we're starting with a lower touch first pass to start with. So if you're used to using the mouse to control the ball, it may be a little bit tricky to get used to this. When a ball is in motion, you have to have your head on a swivel, or else you can't control it. As you can see, there are ball-shaped icons on-screen, and they highlight the ball position. We've learned a lot of lessons on how to create the "cold zone" on-screen to prevent the player from accidentally passing the ball while viewing another player's body language, and we've also solved the "ball breaks to the top" scenario, which happens when the player hits the ball directly above the shoulder-height line. FIFA 22 allows you to swap the ball between left and right hands depending on a variety of situations, including a player who pulls the defender out of position, a situation when a player is not grounded and a cross from the corner. Because you can now swap the ball from left to right hands, we've developed a solution to pass backward by tapping the ball with the left foot, and then
